

Jeffrey Epstein scandal: women with new identities run firms from Epstein-linked property;
 Two women questioned about Prince Andrew in 2010, operating businesses from New York property years after appearing to have left Epstein's entourage The Guardian
 January 7, 2015 Wednesday 8:25 PM GMT

[REDACTED] and [REDACTED] who were questioned by lawyers about whether Prince Andrew had any involvement in Epstein's abuse of underage girls, have since reinvented themselves as [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] is now a pilot and the chief executive of [REDACTED] a website selling [REDACTED] states that she is the owner of [REDACTED]

However according to public records, both businesses have operated from addresses in a building on East 66th Street in Manhattan majority-owned by Epstein's brother Mark, a wealthy property magnate. Two condominiums in the building sold last year for $2.5m and $1.85m.

[REDACTED] company is officially registered with New York authorities at the building.
 Import records show the [REDACTED] company takes deliveries there.

Jeffrey Epstein, a friend of Andrew's who was jailed in 2008 for soliciting prostitution from a minor, was accused in 2011 court documents of using the building to house young women.
 Several rented condominiums in the building have been lived in by Epstein associates, according to public records.

Mark Epstein said in a brief telephone interview on Tuesday: "I own the majority of the units in the building, but I've never heard of those companies," referring to the firms run by [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] who has long claimed that she was Epstein's "sex slave", alleged in a US court filing last week that she was forced to have sexual relations with Andrew. The prince vehemently denies the allegation against him and is under intense pressure to fully account for his friendship with Epstein.

[REDACTED] were among four named Epstein associates identified by US government prosecutors as "potential co-conspirators" who would avoid charges under the controversial plea deal Epstein struck in 2007, which saw him serve just over year in jail for his offences.

The two women both cited their right under the US constitution to avoid incriminating themselves when they were asked a series of questions by lawyers for alleged victims of Epstein under oath in 2010 - including whether underage girls were forced to have sex with Andrew.

[REDACTED] was accused by lawyers in legal filings of "bringing girls to Epstein's mansion to be abused". According to police files, a series alleged victims of Epstein told investigators that they were led to a massage room in Epstein's mansion in Palm Beach, Florida, by a woman named [REDACTED]

One alleged victim claimed to police that she was told [REDACTED] had been bought from her parents in eastern Europe by Epstein when she was 15, according to detectives. One alleged that she was made to have sex with [REDACTED] and to watch her have sex with Epstein.

For internal use only