

A broad range of risk factors could cause the Siris Funds to fail to meet their investment objectives, and there can be no assurance that the Siris Funds will achieve these objectives. Additionally, the Projections in many cases may not reflect the value obtainable in a sale of such investments under current market conditions. If the Siris Funds or Siris Capital were to liquidate such investments under current market conditions, the values obtained may, with respect to certain investments, be materially lower than those indicated in the Projections, as the Projections generally assume the successful implementation of Siris Funds' business plans at the time of disposition, which may, among other factors, include an improvement in current market conditions.
