Transactions in options carry a high degree of risk, and selling (or "writing") uncovered options may entail considerably greater risk. Options are not suitable for all investors. Before engaging in options trading, it is very important that you read the "Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options" (the Option Disclosure Document). This Option Disclosure Document may be obtained directly from the Option Clearing Corporation's website at www.optionsclearing.com in the "Publications" section, or you may request a copy from your Client Advisor.

Before trading in a margin account, investors should be aware of the attendant risks which include, but are not limited to the fact that margin trading increases your level of market risk; loss is not limited to the collateral value in your margin account; and a purchase and/or sale of any securities in your account may be initiated without contacting you, to meet a margin call. Past Performance is not indicative of future results.

Foreign exchange transactions involve multiple risks, including currency risks and settlement risk. Economic or financial instability, lack of timely or reliable financial information or unfavorable political or legal developments may substantially and permanently alter the conditions, terms, marketability, or price of a foreign currency. Profits and losses in transactions in FX will also be affected by fluctuations in currency where there is a need to convert the product's denominations to another currency. Time zone differences may cause several hours to elapse between a payment being made in one currency and an offsetting payment in another currency. Relevant movements in currencies during the settlement period may seriously erode potential profits or significantly increase any losses. Investors in foreign currency options should refer to the section entitled "Special Risks of Foreign Currency Options" in the "Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options" disclosure document.
