Hi Vinit -

Jeff's request for global coverage is an important capability for KCP clients. Operationally, FX (hopefully rates derivatives as well) and equity derivatives shouldn't be a problem for global coverage -- Jeff's trading entities are set up in RMS and summit. No need a new account, as we chatted about. I am following up on the compliance front. It's sure compliance and credit risk management oversights that we need to be we have in place. We can discuss on our call. I just want to be responsive to Jeffrey and let him know that he does have global coverage.

Jeffrey - sorry, to clarify is it 3m USD worth of MXN bonds or 3m MXN, as its a local currency bond.

As soon as NY gets in will get a price on the MBONO 7.75% 11/13/2042 and ping u as and when our view on rates or the currency changes will keep u updated, as here u have risk on both components unlike the PDVSA where the bond was denominated in USDs.

Jeffrey - was looking for value in the EM space, post the PDVSA analysis, started looking at Mexico...

here is a trade I think makes sense -> buying MBONO 30y unhedged

At around 7.5% yield, inflation probably in the 3-4% in the foreseeable future, and USD/MXN likely stable or stronger in real (deflated) terms, I think it is good value. The curve is steep.

If

you look at 10Y10Y UST and 10Y10Y MXN yields, the spread is above 500bp . Say inflation differential is 100bp higher in Mex and credit diff is 100bp (10Y CDS is about 100bp higher in Mexico although Mex has much better debt dyn), this still leaves about 300bp of cushion for real depreciation per year...In sum, it seems good value near term mark to market risk is slower pace of implementation of energy reform and a selloff in USTs happy to discuss further if u find interesting...

This attached image shows the current pricing on the curve, which is slightly weaker than it was in early December. I have also added the term structure of PDVSA and VENZ sovereign bonds, which gives us some relative value across the curve

Bouts of volatility will likely remain an issue and therefore it will trade like a short tail risk trade. However, given that access to dollars remains key for Venezuela, we should expect the government to do whatever they can to avoid a problem servicing these bonds (or even the perception of the same). They do have a heavy amortization schedule in 2014 and 2015.

Looping in Vinit here as he was recently involved with a large offering in the pdvsa credit and may have some take-aways.

My view is the bonds are money good in 2015, as of now, but you are not looking for yield carry (as discussed), and the risks of restructuring and near-term downside due to politics specific to venezuela and chatter around EM assets at large are likely greater than implied by the bonds' current ~85 levels; would use Friday's rally to sell (particularly if you believe it was rates driven vs credit). For what it's worth, we've found Latam family offices that are very familiar the credit (and do like carry) are fully loaded and do not have incremental demand.

Subject: $Y
[I]

Classification: For internal use only

Long $Y Call Options. We like long expiry options to benefit from the present dislocation between interest rates and volatility

Deutsche Bank FX Strategists are calling for USDJPY of 115 by year-end 2014, and 120 by year-end 2015. See DB FX Blueprint published 1/9/14, and note that #2 of the top 10 themes of 2014 (p. 5-6) revolves around extended weakness in the Japanese Yen

USD.

105,

Consider a 10year expiry $Y call option struck at 85 (spot fx forward fx 77.70). Price 4.7% of USD notional

This option has four notable characteristics

If $Y stays at these levels the option decays positively by approx 15-20% per year

If $Y trades 90.00 at any time (arguably a scenario in which the option is no longer wanted) the option "knocks-out" and becomes worthless. While $Y might decline to 90, our quantitative analysis indicates the probability of such a decline is significantly (double?) overpriced by the options market

The premium of the option is quite sensitive to moves in $Y spot - which is atypical for a 10year option.

This also results from the knockout feature. This means if $Y moves quickly by 5% the option increases / decreases in value by almost half, so If $Y rises to 110 or 115 the option can easily be unwound to monetize the profit

vanilla

The option costs roughly 1/3rd compared to the 85 strike call

Maximum loss is premium paid
