there was an election this weekend? shouldnt that have been part of the analysis. a MAJOR part. an early check has your reccommendation down 7 % on the open. and that is the unleveraged play

Jeffrey – we’re following up our phone calls earlier this week with two trade ideas:

1) Buy Turkey 5y CDS – currently @ ~253

- It seems Turkey has rallied recently on the back of the broader macro EM rally and FOMC dovishness, although fundamentally not much has changed in Turkey
- General elections are taking place this weekend, which have created increased tension within Turkey and continue to generate headlines
- Recent opinion polls still point to another hung parliament (additional details in attached DB research piece)
- Outright short EM positions have cleaned up extensively and we believe it makes sense to slowly build out those positions
- Cheap funding has resulted in large rise in corporate debt in Turkey, some of which has been funded in foreign currency

• Turkey foreign reserves amongst lowest of EM countries, second only to Ukraine

2) Revisiting CNH as we know you're generally bearish Asian currencies.

Net premium: USD 160,000 (1.60%)

Thank you,
