FBI Reportedly Seizes 900 Pounds of Meth in Minnesota

Fox News (07/09, Compton) reported that nearly 900 pounds of suspected methamphetamine worth approximately $1.7 million was seized in Minnesota and is considered as one of the largest meth busts in the state's history. Two men, 46-year-old Joel Casas-Santiago and 44-year-old Guillermo Mercado Chaparro, were arrested and charged with controlled substance crimes for their alleged involvement. The suspects are believed to be linked to a larger drug organization operating out of Mexico, according to investigators. "Nine hundred pounds of meth seized during two traffic stops in Minnesota yesterday, in a hit targeting drug trafficking rings you'll hear about soon," Deputy Director Bongino wrote in a post on X on Tuesday. "We're finding them and crushing their operations. More to come. Thanks to our U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration partners for the coordination." The article noted that Deputy Director Bongino also took to X earlier this week with statistics he says demonstrate the FBI's heightened focus on violent crime and illegal immigration "is working." Over the last few months, the FBI has seized 22% more illicit drugs than in the same period last year, including more than 97,000 pounds of cocaine, over 7,000 pounds of meth and more than 2,500 pounds of fentanyl, he wrote. KTTC \(NBC-10\) (07/09, McCabe) and KMSP \(Fox-9\) (07/09, Wermus) also reported on the story.

The New York Times (07/09, Thrush, Barnes) reported that the Trump administration is targeting former FBI director James B. Comey and former CIA director John O. Brennan, who oversaw the investigation into the 2016 Trump campaign's connections to Russia. According to the article, CIA director John Ratcliffe made a criminal referral of Brennan to the FBI, accusing him of lying to Congress, while the FBI is also scrutinizing Comey's role in the Russia investigation. The article noted that even if it is unclear whether the moves will lead to charges, they are among the most significant indications that President Trump's appointees intend to follow through on his campaign to exact retribution against his perceived enemies. The article added that the investigation comes at a precarious moment for the appointed leadership of federal law enforcement agencies. Since Monday, Trump supporters on the far right have lashed out at Attorney General Bondi and FBI brass for closing the investigation into the death of the disgraced financier Jeffrey Epstein. Fox News (07/09, Wallace, Doocy, Singman) reported that during a meeting with African leaders in the State Room of the White House on Wednesday, Fox News senior White House correspondent Peter Doocy asked the president for his response to the investigation. "Do you want to see these two guys behind bars?" Doocy asked the president. "Well, I know nothing about it other than what I read today," Trump said. "But I will tell you, I think they're very dishonest people. I think they're crooked as hell. And, maybe they have to pay a price for that. I believe they are truly bad people and dishonest people," the president added. "So whatever happens, happens." The article highlighted that the full scope of the criminal investigations into Brennan and Comey is unclear, but two sources described the FBI's view of the duo's interactions as a "conspiracy," which could open up a wide range of potential prosecutorial options. Additional reporting on the story was provided by Axios (07/09, Falconer), AFP (07/09, Staff Writer), CNN (07/09, Perez, Lillis), Fox News (07/09, Kornick), The Daily Beast (07/09, Ornedo), The Independent (07/10, Marcus), NBC News (07/09, Dilanian, Reilly, Luce), New York Post (07/09, Nelson), the New York Times (07/09, Thrush, Barnes), the Washington Post (07/09, Roebuck, Stein, Nakashima), and the Washington Times (07/09, Picket).

What to Know About the Jeffrey Epstein Saga

CNN (07/09, Rabinowitz) reported that Jeffrey Epstein was a billionaire and convicted sex offender who was accused of sex trafficking and pedophilia, and had connections to powerful individuals, including Prince Andrew, Bill Clinton, and Donald Trump. Epstein died in his jail cell in 2019, with his death ruled a suicide, but many conspiracy theories have emerged questioning the circumstances of his death and alleging that he had a "client list" of powerful individuals who participated in his alleged crimes. A recent Justice Department memo found no evidence of a "client list" or credible evidence that Epstein blackmailed prominent individuals, and released jailhouse security footage showing no one entered Epstein's cell on the day he died, but the findings have been met with backlash. The article highlighted that conspiracy theories have not subsided and were often pushed by a myriad of right-wing figures, including Director Patel and Deputy Director Bongino. News Nation Now (07/09, Djordjevic) reported that Sigrid McCawley, an attorney representing people suing Jeffrey Epstein's former accountant — one of the last Epstein cases in federal court — believes the government is sitting on a "treasure trove" of information regarding the convicted sex offender. "What's really just astonishing about this recent disclosure from the government is that they know they are sitting on a treasure trove of information, and they're not turning it over," McCawley told "Elizabeth Vargas Reports" on Wednesday. "I've worked on these cases for over 10 years now; there's a plethora of information that the public has not been able to see relating to Epstein and his co-conspirators," McCawley added that the information ranges from financial records to other telling information from computers and other items that could help understand how Epstein ran a sex-trafficking scheme for more than two decades without conviction. She criticized the Trump administration for what she believes is contradictory action to its rhetoric that it would be "an open book" administration dedicated to exposing the truth. Fox News (07/09, Ruiz) added that Jeffrey Epstein's brother, Mark Epstein, is disputing the official finding that his brother killed himself in federal custody. Mark Epstein calls an FBI memo defending the suicide ruling "stupid" and believes his brother was murdered, citing inconsistent autopsy findings and his brother's upcoming bail hearing. Additional

COUNTERTERRORISM

Rhode Island Man Arrested for Threatening to Kill President Trump, AG Bondi, and Stephen Miller

Fox News (07/09, Wehner) reported that Carl D. Montague, a 37-year-old Rhode Island man, has been charged with threats against President Donald Trump and other administration officials. Montague allegedly wrote a threatening post on Truth Social, targeting Trump, Attorney General Bondi, and White House Deputy Chief of Staff Stephen Miller. The FBI investigated and found probable cause to charge Montague, despite his expressing remorse and claiming he did not have the means to carry out the threats. Additional reporting on the story was provided by WKRC \(NBC-10\) (07/09, Fortier), Boston.com (07/09, Dwyer), WJAR \(NBC-10\) (07/09, Levine), WFXR \(Fox-25\) (07/09, Papadopoulos), Newsweek (07/09, Stanton, Castro), and the Boston Globe (07/09, Andersen, Gavin).

Continued Reporting: FBI Searching for 12th Suspect in 'Ambush' of Alvarado ICE Detention Facility

WFAA \(ABC-8\) (07/09, Wedding) reported that the FBI is searching for Benjamin Hanil Song, a former U.S. Marine Corps reservist and the 12th suspect, in connection with the "ambush" at the Prairieland Detention Center in Alvarado, Texas. According to the article, Song is accused of buying guns used in the attack and is charged with attempted murder of federal agents and discharging a firearm during a violent crime, but was not present during the shooting. The article noted that eleven other suspects, including Zachary Evetts, Joy Gibson, Bradford Morris, and others, have been charged with various crimes, including attempted murder and terrorism, and are already in custody, while Song remains at large and is considered armed and dangerous. Additional reporting on the story was provided by CBS News (07/09, Jenkins), Dallas Morning News (07/09, Torres), Royse City Herald-Banner (07/09, Faram), and Fort Worth Star-Telegram (07/09, Davidson).

ICE Busts Former Children's Hospital Chaplain On FBI Terror Watchlist

Just the News (07/09, Severi) reported that Imam Ayman Soliman, a former children's hospital chaplain in Ohio, was arrested by ICE officers. Soliman, an Egyptian national, had his asylum status revoked under the Biden administration and was flagged on the FBI's terror watch list. He has denied any wrongdoing and has sued the federal government multiple times over the flag, with two lawsuits remaining pending. The article noted that it is not clear why Soliman was flagged on the FBI's terror watch list. DailyWire (07/09, Lindquist) also reported on the story.

KOAA \(NBC-5\) (07/09, Cloherty) reported that the FBI is warning about an escalating online threat called "764" that targets young girls, manipulating them into sending explicit images and videos, and coercing them to harm themselves. According to the article, the group, which originated as an online nihilistic gang, uses various platforms, including social media, online games, and email, to contact victims as young as 10 years old. The article explained that the FBI encourages parents and guardians to be vigilant, set parental controls, and look for signs of victimization, such as withdrawal, mood changes, and self-harm, and to report concerns to the FBI hotline.

"Unfortunately, we have cases now in every FBI field office across the country, and that's just what we know about. I speculate that there are many, many thousands more," said Supervisory Special Agent Ash Thorne. "So, when a kid tries to get out or says no, that kind of retaliation goes out to their friends, and there's a great fear, right? Because ultimately, these criminal actors gain status within these communities by the sheer number of victims that they have. Ultimately, we've seen children and at-risk individuals commit suicide out of fear," said Thorne.

17-Year-Old New York Resident Arrested on Terrorism and Weapons Charges

WRGB \(CBS-6\) (07/09, Day) reported that a 17-year-old resident of Halfmoon, NY, was arrested on June 17, 2025, for making a threat of mass harm and terrorism-related charges. According to the article, the arrest followed an investigation into concerning online statements, which led to the discovery of materials supporting acts of terrorism and weapons at their home. The teen is currently being held without bail at the Capital District Juvenile Secure Detention Center in Albany, NY, and the investigation remains ongoing. The article noted that the FBI's Joint Terrorism Task Force assisted with the case.

Continued Reporting: Plane Forced to Land After Passenger Claimed His Laptop Was a Bomb

WKRC \(CBS-12\) (07/09, Staff Writer) reported that a passenger, 27-year-old Taj Taylor, claimed his laptop was a bomb during Allegiant flight 1023, forcing an emergency landing. According to the article, the FBI and Pinellas County Sheriff's Office investigated and found no bomb, determining the threat was false. Taylor was arrested and charged with making a false bomb threat, and reportedly told police he had recently been released from a mental health facility.

COUNTERINTELLIGENCE

Chinese Spy Arrested on Texas University COVID Research Theft Charges

The Center Square (07/09, Blankley) reported that Chinese national Xu Zewei, 33, has been arrested in Milan, Italy, for allegedly hacking a Texas university to steal COVID-19 research on behalf of the People's Republic of China. According to the article, Xu Zewei and another Chinese national, Zhang Yu, 44, were charged with computer intrusions, including the HAFNIUM hacking campaign, and stealing research from U.S.-based universities and immunologists. Xu Zewei awaits extradition to the United States, while Zhang Yu remains at large, with the FBI seeking information about his whereabouts. "While the world was reeling from a virus that originated in China, the Chinese government plotted to steal U.S. research critical to vaccine development," FBI Houston Special Agent in Charge Douglas Williams said. "Xu Zewei, an alleged hacker acting on behalf of China's primary spy agency, targeted COVID-19 data using sophisticated cyber techniques and tradecraft. His landmark arrest by FBI Houston agents in Italy proves that we will scour the ends of the earth to hold criminal foreign adversaries accountable." Additional reporting on the story was provided by Tampa Free Press (07/09, Grissom), TechRadar (07/09, Fadilpasic), Texas Scorecard (07/09, Wilson), and The Epoch Times (07/09, Fang).

FISA Court Approves FBI Effort to Share New Evidence With Congress

Just the News (07/09, Solomon, Dunleavy) reported that the U.S. Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court has approved the Justice Department's request to review and share new evidence related to the Russiagate scandal with Congress, specifically regarding the FISA warrants targeting former Trump campaign associate Carter Page. According to the article, the DOJ is seeking to disclose information to Congress while redacting sensitive details, in response to requests from the GOP-led House and Senate Judiciary Committees for documents related to the Crossfire Hurricane investigation. The move is part of an effort to provide Congress with information to guide future hearings and determine if additional reforms of FISA are needed, with Director Patel working to hand over more evidence to Congress at the behest of President Donald Trump. The article clarified that the FBI's Crossfire Hurricane operation was flawed, and Special Counsel Durham's report found no evidence of collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia. Durham's investigation undercut the credibility of the Steele dossier, and his report noted that the FBI ignored the lack of corroboration for the dossier's allegations. The article noted that the DOJ and FBI are responding to requests from Representative Jordan for documents and transcripts related to the Crossfire Hurricane investigation, including briefing documents and a comparison of the treatment of the Crossfire Hurricane and Clinton investigations.

Trump Officials Keep Getting Impersonated by A.I. 'Vishing' Scammers

Time (07/09, Guzman) reported that Trump officials, including Secretary of State Marco Rubio and White House Chief of Staff Susie Wiles, have been impersonated by malicious actors using AI-generated audio in "vishing" scams. According to the article, the scams involve impersonating well-known figures to manipulate officials and gain access to information or accounts, with the goal of exploiting them for sensitive information. The article noted that the FBI and other experts warn that verifying the identity of callers and being cautious of unsolicited requests for sensitive information can help prevent falling victim to these scams.

Opinion: Trump Administration's Lie Detector Campaign Against Leakers Threatens National Security Priorities

An opinion piece published by The Conversation (07/09, O'Neill) reported that the Trump administration's campaign to use polygraphs to uncover leaks to the press is unlikely to succeed due to the subjective nature of polygraph results. Polygraphs measure physiological responses, but there are no specific reactions associated with lying, and results are not generally admissible in U.S. courts. The author assessed that the use of polygraphs may have a chilling effect, discouraging internal candor and diverting energy away from national security priorities, potentially hindering institutional resilience and adaptation to complex threats. The article noted that at agencies such as the DHS and the FBI, polygraphs are reportedly being used more frequently – and more punitively – to identify internal dissenters.

Opinion: Counterintelligence in the Absence of Evidence

An opinion piece published by Clearance Jobs (07/09, Burgess) reported that the British Security Service's Operation Wedlock was a decades-long surveillance campaign sparked by a CIA tip about a potential MI6 mole, with no direct evidence ever found. The operation's logic was influenced by James Jesus Angleton's worldview, which held that the absence of evidence could indicate a skilled concealment, leading to a mole hunt that damaged trust and careers. The cases of Aldrich Ames, Robert Hanssen, and Yuri Nosenko illustrate the dangers of recursive logic and the need for 360-degree vision in counterintelligence, where the search for certainty can lead to distortion and false accusations. The article highlighted that the cases of Aldrich Ames and Robert Hanssen, who were both found to be moles within the CIA and FBI, respectively, are also examined, and it is noted that these breaches were not detected through the use of intuition or speculation, but rather through concrete evidence and careful investigation.

Major Colleges Face Heat Over Chinese Scholarship Ties as Espionage Concerns Mount

Fox News (07/09, Phillips) reported that the China Select Committee is investigating major U.S. universities, including Dartmouth, Notre Dame, and the University of California system, over their ties to the Chinese Scholarship Council (CSC). According to the article, the committee alleges that the CSC program is a covert pipeline for Beijing to gain access to sensitive American research and technology, and may be indirectly subsidized by U.S. federal research grants. The article noted that Universities such as Notre Dame and Dartmouth have already terminated or plan to end their participation in the CSC program, amid concerns over potential espionage and technology transfer. The article did not contain a direct FBI mention.

CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS

Live Entertainment CEO Indicted for Orchestrating Conspiracy to Rig Bidding Process for Public University Arena

KOMO News (07/09, Staff Writer) reported that a federal grand jury has indicted Timothy J. Leiweke, Co-Founder and Chief Executive Officer of Oak View Group (OVG), for allegedly orchestrating a conspiracy to rig the bidding process for an arena at a public university in Austin, Texas, the DOJ's Antitrust Division announced. According to the article, the indictment, filed in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Texas, claims that from approximately February 2018 through at least June 2024, Leiweke conspired with the Chief Executive Officer of a competitor. The DOJ said the alleged conspiracy involved rigging the bidding for the development, management, and use of a multi-purpose arena on the university's campus, referred to as the "Arena Project." "Timothy Leiweke allegedly led a scheme designed to steer the contract for entertainment services at a public university's arena to his company. Public contracts are subject to laws requiring an open and competitive bid process to ensure a level playing field," said Assistant Director in Charge Christopher G. Raia of the FBI New York Field Office. "The FBI is determined to ensure that those who disregard fair competition principles do not benefit from a rigged bidding process targeting our communities and public institutions." The Seattle Times (07/09, Bernard), KUSA \(NBC-9\) (07/09, Snyder), KXAN \(NBC-4\) (07/09, Jones), and the Wrap (07/09, Patton) also reported on the story.

Prosecutors Question Doctors About UnitedHealth's Medicare Billing Practices

The Wall Street Journal (07/09, Weaver, Mathews) reported that the DOJ's criminal healthcare-fraud unit is investigating UnitedHealth Group's Medicare billing practices, including how the giant company deployed doctors and nurses to gather diagnoses that bolstered its payments, people familiar with the matter said. According to the article, in recent weeks, former UnitedHealth employees said they had been questioned by prosecutors working for the healthcare-fraud unit. The FBI and the Department of Health and Human Services' Office of Inspector General also participated in some of the interviews, the former employees said. The former employees said the investigators asked detailed questions about UnitedHealth's efforts to encourage the documentation of certain lucrative diagnoses, including testing patients, implementing procedures to ensure that medical conditions were captured, and sending nurses to patients' homes. The New York Post (07/09, Herzlich) and Reuters (07/09, Staff Writer) also reported on the story.

DC Police and FBI Offer $40,000 Reward for Info on Shooting of Intern Eric Tarpinian-Jachym

ABC News (07/09, Peterson, Forrester) reported that officials have increased the reward for information leading to the person who fatally shot a 21-year-old congressional intern in Washington, D.C., last month. Eric Tarpinian-Jachym, of Granby, Massachusetts, was killed on June 30 at approximately 10:28 p.m. after getting caught in gunfire in northwest Washington, D.C., police said. According to the article, the Metropolitan Police Department said on Tuesday that a reward of $40,000 is available for anyone who is able to provide information that leads to the "arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible." Police were offering a previous award of $25,000, but increased it by an additional $15,000 "thanks to a contribution from our partners at the FBI Washington Field Office," officials said. Investigators said they recovered the suspect vehicle last week and stated that while the shooting was targeted, Tarpinian-Jachym was not among the intended victims. D.C. Police Chief Pamela Smith told reporters last week, "We do have some good video footage, and I say good video footage that's a little grainy, so we're bringing in the FBI to kind of help enhance the video resolution so we can see a little bit better." The Washington Examiner (07/09, Rosciglione) also reported on the story.

Opening Arguments Wrap Up for Trial of FBI Agent Accused of Sexually Assaulting Three Women

WJLA \(ABC-7\) (07/09, Flores) reported that jury selection and opening arguments wrapped up Wednesday evening for the trial of the FBI agent accused of sexually assaulting three women after providing free tattoos and photoshoots. According to the article, police arrested Eduardo Valdivia in November 2024. Jury selection took up most of Wednesday's court proceedings, but opening arguments began around 3:20 p.m. Both sides took about an hour each to make their opening arguments. The main argument centered around whether or not the alleged sexual acts that took place were consensual. The prosecutor stated to the jury that Valdivia "preyed on, isolated, and sexually assaulted three women" at his tattoo studios. Meanwhile, Valdivia's lawyer told the jury the alleged acts were consensual and in exchange for the free services he provided to the women. The prosecution team brought up the fact that the FBI agent, who is currently suspended without pay, was trained to be undercover and used those skills in these alleged incidents by having different aliases. WUSA \(CBS-9\) (07/09, Video) also reported on the story.

Federal Authorities End Idaho Search for Suspect in Kids' Deaths After Finding Look-Alike Hiker

The Associated Press (07/09, Boone) reported that federal authorities in Idaho say they have ended a search in the Sawtooth National Forest after determining it was all case of mistaken identity. The search began Saturday after the U.S. Marshals Service Greater Idaho Fugitive Task Force said a family reported they saw a man who looked like Travis Decker, who is wanted in connection with the deaths of his three daughters in Washington state. The article added that Decker has been wanted since June 2, when a sheriff's deputy in Washington found his truck and the bodies of his three daughters. The family was near a Bear Creek area campsite when they saw a man who was the same height and roughly the same weight as Decker, and also had similar hair, beard and tattoos on his arm and calf. Additional tips followed, and federal, state and local law enforcement agencies joined the Marshals Service in the search. They found the man Wednesday afternoon, U.S. Marshals Service Supervisory Deputy Michael Leigh said in a press release, and determined he was not Decker. The Marshals Service is offering a reward of up to $20,000 for information leading to Decker's capture.

Three Zizians Face Trial Together in Maryland Amid Sprawling Federal Investigation

The Associated Press (07/09, Skene) reported that three members of a violent cultlike group, including its alleged ringleader, will be tried together on charges of trespassing, gun and drug possession after police discovered them camping in box trucks in rural western Maryland. The group known as Zizians, which attracted a fringe contingent of computer scientists who connected online over their shared anarchist beliefs, has been linked to six killings spanning three states in recent years. The Maryland cases were originally scheduled for separate trials, but the defendants requested a joint proceeding despite concerns from their attorneys; a judge granted the request following a court hearing Tuesday afternoon. According to the article, Jack "Ziz" LaSota and her associates, Michelle Zajko and Daniel Blank were arrested in February after a man told police that "suspicious" people had parked two box trucks on his property and asked to camp there for a month, according to authorities. The trucks were found in a largely remote wooded area near the Maryland-Pennsylvania line, a mountainous region dotted with small towns. The article mentioned that LaSota, a transgender woman who's regarded as the group leader, entered the courtroom Tuesday hoisting a brown paper bag filled with documents. Throughout the hearing, LaSota and Zajko repeatedly interjected to address the judge directly, disregarding conventional courtroom practices and occasionally speaking over their attorneys. The regular interruptions added to the already unusual circumstances of the case, which hinges on the findings of federal investigators despite being prosecuted in state court. The main issue discussed Tuesday was the timeline of the proceedings. After the trio was arrested in February on trespassing and illegal gun possession charges, prosecutors filed a superseding indictment last month with new allegations, including LSD possession. Defense attorneys argued prosecutors are trying to slow-walk the case while federal authorities continue investigating the Zizians. The article noted that Zajko faces federal firearms charges in Vermont because police allege she purchased weapons recovered in connection with a border patrol agent's killing.

President Trump's Justice Department Targets Doctors, Clinics Who Provide Sex Change Procedures to Minors

Fox News (07/09, Casiano) reported that the DOJ on Wednesday said it has subpoenaed more than 20 doctors and clinics that are involved in providing minors with sex change procedures. The agency is investigating healthcare fraud, false statements and more, it said. "Medical professionals and organizations that mutilated children in the service of a warped ideology will be held accountable by this Department of Justice," Attorney General Pamela Bondi said in a statement. In April, Bondi issued a memo stating that the DOJ would be investigating and prosecuting those who offer sex change treatments for minors. The Guardian (07/09, Levine) also reported on the story.

Police Name Suspect in Killing of Three-Year-Old in D.C.

The Washington Post (07/09, Benn) reported that D.C. police have identified a suspect in the shooting death of 3-year-old Honesty Cheadle. According to the article, police said they have an arrest warrant for first-degree murder while armed for Charles Rucker, 24, of Southeast Washington. The reward for information leading to his arrest and conviction has been raised from $25,000 to $50,000, with funds from the FBI's Washington field office and the U.S. Marshals Service.

WCNC \(NBC-36\) (07/09, Shiff, Ablon) reported that in 2016, then-18-year-old Alejandro Castillo allegedly killed his coworker 23-year-old Truc Quan "Sandy" Ly Le. Nine years later, Castillo is still wanted. Castillo is currently on the Ten Most Wanted Fugitives list, wanted for murder. Castillo and Le worked together at a restaurant in Charlotte and had previously dated. The article added that it was reported in October 2017 Le's body was found in a wooded part of Cabarrus County. She was shot in the head according to the FBI. The FBI said in 2017 Castillo owed Le about $1,000. Text messages between him and Le revealed he agreed to repay the loan to Le on Aug. 9, 2016. However, the FBI alleges Castillo instead had Le withdraw a large sum of money from an ATM before killing her, citing an investigation from the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Police Department. He then fled the state in Le's car along with a new girlfriend. The girlfriend would eventually turn herself in two months later to Mexican authorities. After returning to North Carolina, the FBI said she faces charges tied to the homicide as an accomplice. While Castillo's last known residence was in Charlotte, he has ties to Phoenix, Arizona, where Le's car was found. The FBI also said he was spotted crossing into Mexico and may be living in one of two cities in the state of Aguascalientes: Francisco de los Romo or Pabellón de Arteaga. He's fluent in both English and Spanish. The article mentioned that Beth Boggess, Assistant Special Agent in charge at the FBI's office in Charlotte, said the Bureau has leveraged local, national, and international partnerships to continue working on the case, from Charlotte to Mexico. That work has led them to learn Castillo is getting assistance from others. "What we know is that Castillo has people that are helping him evade law enforcement capture. And what we want those people to know is that they are also committing a crime and helping him evade law enforcement," she said. Boggess credited the work among agencies as a critical part of getting justice for families affected by violent crimes. "Our work and relationships are stronger than ever, and we work together collaboratively to capture these fugitives," she said.

"I can't say that the wrongdoing I have pointed out so far is more in the area of political weaponization of the FBI and the Department of Justice, and I can't say it rose to the criminal level, but evidently the Department of Justice has reason to believe that crime has been committed, and I'll have to defer to them. That's their job, not mine," Grassley told reporters. "My focus is on transparency and accountability for the American people."
