Hi Jennie,
I did receive this and think that is a great plan. Cori on our side is pulling together our tax experts. I agree the first step is for the tax experts to talk. Once they have a structure that both sides feel good about then we should get the corporate/deal lawyers involved. But since tax is the issue, they need to land somewhere first.

I will ask Cori to email Bruce Davison at Denton's tomorrow AM.

Hi Russ. I was able to speak with my legal team a few minutes ago about our call. They raised several questions, thoughts and ideas, and it became clear to me that what would really be helpful and greatly appreciated, is if we can get the tax lawyers on the phone and have a direct conversation with them to avoid the back and forth. I know if we give them the opportunity to engage directly we can come up with a good solution where everyone feels confident that Nathan doesn't have risk/exposure. We might have one of our business lawyers join the call (Rick and/or Kristina), and you may want to do the same. My thinking here is when the tax lawyers figure this out, we'd probably want our respective business lawyers to hear it, know what they are suggesting and why, and know what to confirm and/or draft for us to look at. Please let me know if you are ok with this and we can get a call coordinated. Thanks Jennie
