The Right Address

Wednesday, November 09, 2011

Location, location, location - getting it right is crucial. Our hotel picks this week occupy prime real estate all over the globe (don't worry, they have stellar service, great looks and well-stocked mini-bars, too). Over on Paris' Left Bank, Hotel Montalembert is steps from the cafés of St. Germain des Pres, the Musée D'Orsay and the Tuileries gardens. On Vegas' Strip, ARIA has 15 restaurants, an impressive art collection and in-room tech that lets you dim the lights without leaving bed. And the Hotel on Rivington is the place to stay in New York's hip Lower East Side, with OMG city views and a deep soaking tub in every room. Staying au courant has never been easier.

Life on the Left Bank

Hotel Montalembert - Paris

With impeccable Left Bank credentials behind its 1920s stone facade, the Montalembert was transformed into a temple of minimalist chic by designer Grace Leo-Andrieu back in 1990, and likes to claim it was Paris's first boutique hotel. If it's a question of location, here you really can explore most of Paris on foot, with the cafés of St-Germain-des-Prés and fabulous shopping in one direction, the Musée d'Orsay in the other, and the Tuileries gardens and the Louvre a leisurely stroll across the river.

Glass and Steel Meet the LES

Hotel on Rivington - New York

New York's Lower East Side has always been an immigrant neighborhood, offering a chance for reinvention to anyone bold enough to take it. It's a place that changes constantly, where downtown fashion, music and art now collide between old tenements and glass-and-steel towers. In recent years, it's shown up on tourist maps, thanks to the hip property that arrived here first: the Hotel on Rivington.

The New Center Of The Vegas Strip

ARIA Resort - Las Vegas

In Vegas, location isn't everything, but it doesn't hurt. ARIA, the centerpiece of the CityCenter complex, is in the middle of The Strip's action. New Haven, Connecticut-based architecture firm Pelli Clarke Pelli is behind the sleek, curvilinear look of the 4,004-room tower, which is also the world's largest LEED Gold-certified building. Game on for the humming of slot machines and the thumping of nightclubs at one of Vegas's hottest new additions.

Boutique Style on a Roman Hilltop

Hotel Lord Byron - Rome

Rome might have more hotel options than ancient ruins. But few properties in the historic city manage to top the intimate service and boutique Art Deco style you'll find at the Hotel Lord Byron in the elegant Parioli neighborhood. As a guest here, your backyard is the green expanse of Villa Borghese, and the hotel's hilltop location makes for extraordinary views.

A Seaside Boutique on the Athenian Riviera

The Margi - Athens, Greece

This seaside boutique resort on the Vouliagmeni Peninsula - Athens' southern outskirts - has a tasteful, arty vibe that sets it apart from many of the city's hotels. From each of the 89 rooms and balconies overlooking the pine forests and beaches of the Athenian Riviera, you'll be close enough to visit the historical sites and monuments but you'll feel like you're a million miles away from the hectic city.

Caribbean Chill on the Spice Isle

Mount Cinnamon - Grenada

You've done the Caribbean, but chances are you haven't been to Grenada in the ultrarelaxed Windward Islands northwest of Trinidad and Tobago. Tourism is relatively new to the Spice Isle, so finding gorgeous beaches and tropical landscapes where you can truly be alone is still possible. Mount Cinnamon, with its views of Grand Anse Beach and St Georges, the island's horseshoe-shaped harbor city, is a charming mix of old and new.

Summer Romance, Year-round, in Thailand

Anantara Hua Hin - Thailand

Ever since King Rama VI constructed his summer palace in Hua Hin in the 1920s, visitors have been flocking to the royal resort town, just three hours south of Bangkok. Inspired by the region's palatial architecture, the 187-room Anantara Hua Hin Resort & Spa is a colorful oasis of romantic design, with elegant teak and burnt umber sleeping pavilions surrounded by a tranquil lagoon, five distinctive gardens and, a few steps away, the calm Gulf of Thailand.

Karon Phunaka - Thailand

Getting to rooms at Phuket's Karon Phunaka isn't for the faint of heart: Step into a small glass box, and a funicular carries you up a steep, jungle-covered mountain. But, the pay-off is worth it - amazing views across the town of Karon and out to the blue Andaman Sea are enjoyed from all 86 of the hotel's spacious rooms. You'll also be able to take in the panoramas from the oversized infinity-edge pool, small spa, open-air lobby and Thai restaurant with walls of windows. The Karon Phunaka may not be heaven, but this high up, who can blame you for taking it as the next best thing?

A Cliffside Escape in Sicily

The Ashbee Hotel - Sicily

To visit Taormina in Sicily without booking a room at The Ashbee Hotel is to miss the point entirely. Only at the Ashbee are there enormous private gardens planted with citrus trees, plus a large pool and lounge areas. And only here will you find panoramic views of Taormina's sparkling gulf coast and the Ionian Sea. The hotel is seconds away from Taormina's stunning ancient Greek theater, close to popular destinations like Messina and Syracuse and minutes from the beautiful Isola Bella - a sunbathers fantasy.

Aristocratic Style in Florence

Grand Hotel Villa Cora - Italy

It's hard to find a Florentine villa more aristocratic than this one. Built in the 19th century just steps from the Boboli Gardens, it was once home to Napoleon III's widow, Empress Eugénie, and since being transformed into a luxury hotel it has welcomed visiting European monarchs. Fresh from a renovation, the furnishings are grander than ever, as are the manicured grounds.

Swiss Efficiency and French Living

Grand Hotel Kempinski Geneva

The most cosmopolitan city in Switzerland, Geneva is where the Swiss art of efficiency mingles with the French art of living. And with its outstanding location at the edge of the lake, elegant light-filled rooms and dedicated staff, the Grand Hotel Kempinski & Spa embodies this combination. Best of all, it's within easy reach of the charming old medieval town, more than 40 museums and, of course, all the best chocolatiers and watchmakers in the world.
