I can assure you that all I'm doing is listening. The NOTE taking is proof of that. I asked for Soros' home address a week ago to send him a thank you letter, as a mere courtesy. When you said call him, I reached out for his number. When I receive it I will call him. And you are wrong about Charlie. He doesn't listen. It's like Ground Hog Day. That's why I can't get through to him.

I met with three tv producers today, including Colbert Report and the Daily Show. Michael came back to me and he is scheduling a time with me on Monday. I'm sitting down with the President of Hearst on Tuesday. I'm meeting CAA and Google next Wednesday. Seeing Clinton for dinner on Wednesday night. YouTube Thursday.

I'm doing all I can with the resources I have at hand.

For meaningful suggestions and not a sound bite, suggestions will take a serious amount of time,, I will not be back before thanksgiving. Charlie at least gives the impression that he is a good listener. he appears engaged and projects curiosity , I fear that you appear to have a lot to say and are wholly focused on saying it. I would practice active listening. NO NOTE taking. some of your questions I" should i send a thank you " ,, seems too easy to answer

I reached out to his best friend for his phone number and asked where he was. Didn't hear back. Suggestions?
