Subject: Wearality announces Former Google Ambassador Michael Jones As New CEO

Wearality, the VR company and one of our first portfolio companies just announced that they've hired Michael Jones from Google as CEO. "Prior to joining Wearality, Jones served as chief technology advocate for Google, representing technology's benefit to users and societies around the world. He came to Google through its acquisition of Keyhole Corp., the digital-mapping software company based on his patents that more than a billion users enjoy as Google Earth. He was also engineering director of the team that created OpenGL, a cornerstone of the computer graphics industry. His experience redefining the possible for users and developers exemplifies the character of Wearality."

I am on the board of Wearality. We are still raising money if anyone is interested in talking to them or introducing them to potential investors.
