

From: "Nowak, Martin" <[REDACTED]>
To: Jeffrey Epstein <jeevacation@gmail.com> Sent: Sunday, April 13, 2014 2:05:42 PM

i think there are tension/stress/unhappiness sensors inside us for example: energy level, water, food, temperature, pain etthen those with a social component:

lover, wife, family, friends, ...

some of them triggered by individuals

some of them by groups

also social harmony between others could be monitored

so each individual evaluates the network differently happiness = lack of inside tension (illusion of harmony)

evolution has equipped us to be unhappy

it wants us to search optimize ... complain