We're getting there. We removed the four old IBM servers that were at the top of the rack and wiped two routers and a switch. All the hard drives have had holes drilled in them which may have been the best part. We have the old backup tapes out to the unit that wouldn't power on as well. I'm going to reach out to data destruction companies to shred the tapes. I've seen trucks in midtown that roll up and destroy stuff. I'll see if I can find one for the tapes.

We probably have about two hours left to remove the remaining equipment and then that rack should be empty and ready to go.
