Timing and event (for dryboard accident?) - to place silk screens up for you late last Monday and take photos I had to move the dry board toward the kitchen in the dining room. While moving it back into place where you had it , one screw popped and then the other popped that held the dry board in place. The dry board fell on my foot but I managed to catch it before it fell against any furniture or the wall. Screw area in the wood is completely stripped to hold the board on the frame. I do not believe the screw area can be re grooved for the screws to tighten properly to hold the board in the exact position it has to be in. I do not want it to take a chance of it falling with you.

I spoke to RK about it on Tuesday and sent email request for replacement dry board on Wednesday.

However, I will go ahead and order this one below today for you- same size, board moves, wooden with place for eraser and markers, rolling wheels.

My apologies again Sir.

There is an option to use the dry board without the frame - Jo Jo could lean the dry board up by itself longside up against the wall area at the end of the table from your chair, or somewhere, so your guests can see.

The dry board itself is in tact.

My apologies again.

Mark

ZR IT- There are two proposals to move forward toward a permanent solution for infrastructure. ISP with Hughes NET was put into motion this week for install after Thanksgiving.

Proposal 1: Robust/ Terrence Rabsatt- RK has just received cost comparison from Jermaine regarding Terrence's pricing in his latest proposal received for both LSJ and Zorro to present to you. If you approve Terrence can order equipment to begin and install can be scheduled after you leave ZR for holiday visit. Terrence needs two to three weeks to receive requisite equipment he has to order to begin install.

I have attached Jermaine's comparison for your review and Terrence's latest proposal for LSJ and ZR. There is only $3,500.00 difference in Jermaine's findings for ZR. Note Jermaine costed out the best he could via another vendor Terrence is not using and had to contend with combined kit equipment pricing as well.

Option 2: Advanced Communications/ Richard Boltz- This has been presented to you; however, it was sent to Terrence per your request for comparison and is on hold as an option- does not include 8 T1's as Terrence's proposal does.

Best regards,

Mark
