Philippe Starck Takes Manhattan

Hudson Hotel - NYC

At the crossroads of Central Park, Midtown and the Upper West Side, the Hudson Hotel is a testament to NYC's unabashed glam side - a fusion of over-the-top showiness and, somehow, authenticity. The secret sauce that holds it all together is Philippe Starck's whimsical design, from the ivy-clad lobby to the floor of rotating lights streaming through opaque furniture in the hotel bar. With richly appointed rooms and larger-than-life common spaces, the Hudson injects the frenetic energy of Midtown Manhattan with an edgy attitude.

French elegance meets Hollywood trendiness at the Sofitel LA, a 295-room hotel opposite the Beverly Center. Totally renovated in 2007, it delivers a stylish, young Los Angeles. Rooms are modern and comfortable, and come nightfall, you just have to hop on the elevator up to Stone Rose Lounge, which, not surprisingly, is where you'll find some of LA's trendiest.

Quite literally the dream (il sogno) of owner Kiki Van Ritter and her late husband, this five-room villa retreat feels more like the pad of a well-heeled and flamboyant aunt - one who happens to have a screening room, a gym, a butler and a Delano-size pool. The estate, which is filled with hand-picked furniture and personal photographs from all over the world, is only a 15-minute drive from Cortona, the Italian town made famous in Frances Mayes's Under the Tuscan Sun.

A stylish addition to the city, The Mandala is a design hotel that puts guests in the heart of Potsdamer Platz. For all its decadent room amenities and high-design aesthetics, you'd be forgiven for thinking the Mandala was part of a large chain. But this privately owned address within walking distance of the Brandenburg Gate embodies everything that's cutting-edge about Europe's current capital of cool.

Stunning upsets, fierce forehand grunts, tennis duds fit for the nearby streets of Manhattan - it's that time of year again: The US Open is here. The fourth and final Grand Slam tennis tournament of the season and undeniably the coolest, this is America's answer to the stuffy grass-court game of yore. Enter airy Arthur Ashe Stadium in Queens to live music, a pop-up boutique and even a Havana-inspired Cuban café. Sip a signature Honey Deuce cocktail from the Baseline bar as you watch the sport's greats square off against the latest international wunderkind, keeping your eyes peeled for A-list celebs studding the courtside rows. This Jetsetter-exclusive package includes two nights at the UES's mod-chic Mark hotel, two tickets to the US Open, private transfers to and from the stadium and VIP tourney swag. Game, set, match.

Hidden in Marrakech's maze-like medina, Riyad el Mezouar is an opulent hotel housed in a 17th-century former palace that was revamped by interior designer Michel Durand-Meyrier in 2000. It has a home-away-from-home appeal, with a huge roof terrace, tranquil garden courtyard and Romanesque swimming pool - all welcome escapes after a day in the chaotic medina. The friendly staff is on hand to help navigate Marrakech's markets, organize day trips to the Atlas Mountains or Essaouira and host in-house cooking classes.

On a tree-lined street in the residential neighborhood of Friends Colony, the Manor is a center of calm in dizzying Delhi. Housed in a modern bungalow, the 15-room boutique property feels intimate and peaceful, just the kind of place you'd want to return to after a day of touring the city's sights, from the Qutb Minar to the Red Fort. And the hotel's restaurant, Indian Accent, continues to wow with its inventive dishes, meaning that you won't have to travel far for an authentically Indian culinary experience.

When this contemporary design hotel in twin 37-story skyscrapers opened, it received rave reviews for its on-site spa and fastidious, here-to-please staff - and that's saying something in a country known as "the land of smiles." In Bangkok's chaotic downtown heart, the Anantara Bangkok Sathorn is within easy access of the financial and shopping districts, but it's also a great urban sanctuary to begin or end a Thai adventure.

Koh Phangan has a hedonistic reputation from its monthly Full Moon Parties, beloved by backpackers and gap-year youngsters. But the Rasananda, on the opposite side of the island, is pure Thai class. Known for its intimate size and attentive staff, the resort is made up of 44 villas and suites, each with a private pool. The resort matches the surrounding area's natural beauty without being overbearing: The spa's teakwood treatment rooms are disguised in the jungle's fauna; the signature bistro serves locally inspired dishes al fresco. Taken all together, it's an escape to island paradise.
