Robin Li has built the most popular search site, Baidu, in the world's most populous country, helped in part by rival Google's missteps in China. Further helped by rapid growth in Internet advertising and the number of Internet users in China -- about 457 million in January, Baidu's U.S.-traded shares more than doubled in the past year, pushing Li's wealth up to $9.4 billion and making him the richest man in China.
