He says, "Forgive me, but copying other copies by hand allows many chances for error. How do we know we aren't copying somebody else's mistakes?"

The head monk says, "That's a good point, my son. I will take one of these new copies down to my vault and study it against the original document."

He says, "Holy Father?"

The sobbing gets louder as he gets near. Finally he finds the old priest sitting at a table with both the new copy and the original ancient book in front of him.

He says, "Father, what's wrong?"

The old monk says, "The word is celebrate."
