
From: Vincenzo Iozzo <[REDACTED]>
Sent: Saturday, June 18, 2016 11:03 PM
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: Jeffrey E.; Jeremy Rubin
Subject: Re: Open letter from the dao's attacker

Sorry was driving, I think that regardless of whether it's real or not it's great because it's forcing the community into a logical consistency game. Both the letter and the "bribing" are great ways to test dao's and ethereum's "core beliefs/principles/design choices" and show how/why they fail in the real world. So either way they lost and the attacker won

Speculation: I don't think he did it for the money

Sent from my iPhone

On Jun 18, 2016, at 13:57, ji@media.mit.edu <mailto:[REDACTED]> wrote:

Alleged attacker bribing miners not to fork.

<http://archive.is/nMYa> <<http://archive.is/nMYa>>

Sent from my iPhone

On Jun 18, 2016, at 07:08, Vincenzo Iozzo <[REDACTED]> <mailto:[REDACTED]>

<http://pastebin.com/CcGUBgDG> <<http://pastebin.com/CcGUBgDG>>

Sent from my iPhone

=