Sorry, I misunderstood you. Yes, that is what we/Gagosian proposed to the buyer. Do the sale now, pay us in full and then the buyer has to submit the work for authentication. If the Giacometti committee says it's a fake within 6 months of the date of our sale, we refund the buyer's purchase price (without interest) and get the work back (assuming the committee hasn't destroyed it, which they have the right to do under French law).

This is on the Giacometti? What type of insurance are you talking about? I know there are companies that will provide title insurance for art, but I'm not aware of any that will provide insurance on authenticity. Do you know of any?
