I agree I should not use slides or even do a presentation.

I do think a bit about how surprised I am at how tough doing good philanthropy is and what has really worked might be interesting to them.

I will find a time for us to talk this week.

I am confident, that with the right approach you will be able to raise at least 100 billion. everyone of hyper wealth is dealing with the same issues. how to give some away. I can think of nothing that you can do that would terminate in so much leverage for both your personal giving goals. and reframing and creating a new giving structure that carried on for many years. . I can see that selling yourself is not your strong point. usually no need . here . I think you will possibly make some new friends. share ideas, with a new group of people that would like to do good but are short on know how. no slides. no dec (except for follow up with their t and e lawyers.). I would like to help you. no more no less. I love the idea. I know the issue , I know the people.
