fulltime job, perish the thought. I thought Ian had sent you an outline of various possibilities--since I am allergic to all money discussions. Let me chat with him today.

The question is how much you want to do. In my estimation, the full plan, rolled out over 18-24 months, has a transformative effect and would allow you to be as public as you want to be, and, I believe, enable you to be who you want to be without any meaningful blowback. This allows us to not only take advantage of opportunities as they arise, but allows us to create opportunities through controlling your own story--putting you in a position to be as aggressive, creative, controversial, or authoritative with your public identity as you might want. You would be immunized from opprobrium and would the people who associate themselves with you. Obviously, we could take a lesser, piecemeal course too. We could begin by just developing a new web presence--both a news site and a clean-up of the existing search results. A good part of this could be done without substantial time from you--at least in the initial backend phase. Then, too, if you're still unsure about what you want to do, I have no problem continuing to chat with you about it on a casual basis. mw
