The conference -- from what I read in the program -- looks very interesting. The pairings are really inspired. And make me want to go back to school. How are you involved? And are you building nuclear defense systems in your spare time? Don't tell my editors my subject matter is inane. Lest we forget, I studied [REDACTED] not Physics at Stanford. Eat your heart out, Larry Summers.

Enjoy NM. I was just there to visit the Lightning field.

I'm at Los Alamos today, my ranch in Santa Fe tomorrow.. the conference is only one aspect in a larger program filled with the super smart. Make your time. I was impressed with both your writing ability (I fear wasted on inane topics) and your presence. There are really fun and lucrative opportunities.

Dear Jeffrey,

Thank you for having us over for lunch last weekend. I'm sorry I don't have the manners to respond sooner. I had a rather packed few days in NY and now back in LA. Such is life in a start-up.

I have to look at the program properly and then we can speak. I'll coordinate with Wesley.

All the best,

[REDACTED], I have funded an intellectual adventure where I think you may be able to play a role. I've copied my assistant on this email so that she can try to set a time to speak / meet. In the meantime google the "www.www conference."
