I've done some research and it seems the two spas below (see links) off=r good thai treatments, the latter is more chic but urban thai has great re=iews and they might come to the house - would you like me to check?

I've emailed peo=le i know in Paris , and am waiting to hear back. Then of course ther= are the classics, which are always considered the best, the spa at the Geo=ges V , the Anne Semoine spa at the Bristol..

There is also U Spa, Jacques Garcia's s=a at the Hotel Fouquet, it has a large swimming pool which migh= be nice for you to swim in when you're there..

The Jacques Garcia-designed Hotel Fou=uet's Barriere may not have the history of the traditional Parisian='palace' hotels but nor did it have the same build constric=ions when it came to designing its spa. Consequently, the U Spa houses one o= the few hotel swimming pools in the city centre, and one of the largest to= at 16m in length.
