Dear =effrey

I would not have said crispr etc is taboo - =t's as mainstream as you can get, and scientific journals are full of =apers about it.

One taboo topic I am =nterested in is the area of LENR - so called above unity devices that =roduce more energy than they should according to conventional =hysics.

There was a good summary a few months =go on the Edge website
<https://www.edge.org/response-detail/26753>

A 1 year trial of the =MW Rossi ECAT reactor in the US seems to have gone well, and the =eport is due out in a week or two. Rossi recently confirmed that =he energy output has been greater that 1.5 times the energy put =n:

The Indian Journal =urrent Science has a recent special issue on LENR: Here is the =ink:

I am in contact with a company =n Britain working on a very promising device, currently being tested in =ome UK government laboratories. =
