- Our four people from Berlin will be here from beginning to end of June
- I am going to introduce them to Martin, and show him what we intend to do, as well as results. He was reluctant with housing a bunch of people we did not know, though at his department, which is understandable.
- I have another office at the Media Lab, and there is public space that we can probably also use for working (especially if it is less busy in June).

At the moment, I spend a lot of my time at MIT and Media Lab, to get to know other groups and researchers; Josh Tenenbaum (AI) has a fellow working on Bayesian models of intentionality, Martin Rohrmeyer from linguistics tries to uncover the grammars of music, Sandy Pentland builds computational models of social interaction, ... The place is full of great minds and inspiration. Thanks for getting me here.
