Jeffrey

Sorry for delayed response as I was out of office at a meeting. Per the email between us all the way at the bottom of this chain it was $12m for April 1. I have someone else coming in for $3m at the beginning of the month so $9m would cover our soft commitments –in fact something even close to that gets us there as at that is point a million doesn't move the needle materially in terms of changing our % risk exposures.

Should I schedule with [REDACTED] for a meeting then or just call then?
What does this mean for April investment?
I will adjust to anything you decide but just need to figure it out so I can adjust accordingly if necessary.

Thanks

Hi. I hope all is well.

I know [REDACTED] has been working with my office to try to find a time for us to meet. I know it's been a little challenging. I hope we get it done soon but if we don't, can I assume the schedule laid out at the bottom of the email chain is still intact or should I not assume that and then wait until we meet. As we do back to back allocations, there is a lot I need to do as things evolve. Please let me know.
As always thanks for your continued support.
Best regards
Ari

It's not a problem, but I just need to juggle some things on this end so if so please confirm and I'll take care of what I need to on this side

Jeffrey
It was good to see you. Thanks again for your support and your flexibility of timing.

As promised, I'm getting back to you with an ideal schedule for us. Please let me know if this works.

March -$10m
April $12m
May $14m

June $14m.

As mentioned in my last email, for your accounts we will continue to honor the initial founders share class terms and not charge the terms new investor capital is being charged.

After being out the last two weeks for two conferences and a family vacation, I am back in the office if you have any questions.

Best regards
Ari
