
From: S.M. Kosslyn <[REDACTED]>
Sent: Monday, March 28, 2011 4:23 PM
To: Epstein Jeffrey
Subject: Fwd: NYTimes: For $1,000, Site Lets Celebrities Say It Ain't So

HI =EE...

FYI.

s.

////////////////////////////////////=////////////////////////////////////

Stephen M. Kosslyn
Director, Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences Stanford University
75 Alta Road
Stanford, CA 94305
voice: [REDACTED]

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Robin S. Rosenberg" <Robin@DrRobinRosenberg.com>

Date: March 28, 2011 8:00:39 AM PDT

To: Stephen Kosslyn <[REDACTED]>
</iv>

Subject: NYTimes: For $1,000, Site Lets Celebrities Say It Ain't So

From The New York Times:

For $1,000, Site Lets Celebrities Say It Ain't So

A new Web site called iCorrect allows people who are unhappy about how they are portrayed on the Internet to set the record straight for $1,000 a year.

<http://www.nytimes.com/2011/03/28/world/europe/28icorrect.html>

Get The New York Times on your iPhone for free by visiting <http://itunes.com/apps/nytimes>

Sent from my phone; that's why it's short and may have typos.

=