for once, not a strong view-- instinctively I am against drugs (and I would have had less pain post surgery if I had taken pain killers), but I understand their utility, dont object if others take them, just ask them to keep in mind possible long term negative side effects-- for example, we dont even know the long term effects of Ritalin or aderall (??) given to kids for attentional disorders since you watch your food carefully, I assume that you watch your pharms carefully as well
