we walked on the beach five years ago. i told you i did not want to be your parent. i love you . as a partner not as a child, however you would need to learn discipline, i told you i could neither provide the necessary discipline to either [REDACTED] or you. this has led us to a place where you have no authority figure that you respect enough to ask advice , take directions and suffer consequences. you are an adult. you will only do as you please, i understand. it is your prerogative. you say you will get money elsewhere.? where and how? does honesty extend to these type of questions.. I can handle the truth. . I will help you , if you ask for it. i will always give you my best advice if you ask for it. I find it difficult to spend time, give issues real thought,. and then my advice is ignored. the results are almost always the same. I should have listened when i had the chance. but... .. Where i told you that I like humpy dumpy. need to put pieces together, i realize in some instances it is more like trying to exhume myself. I am finding this time very very hard.
