if ,you are not to blame for what happend,, in this case,, who is?. THAT IS MY POINT> you cant avoid it- It is as a direct result of your many poor choices. yours and yours alone., . I am not disciplining you. you have not been punished, sentenced or penalized by me, I love you and it pains me to see this.. when people suggest you treat me with the same degree of careless reckless poor judgment that you have treated balle , no one suggests you are not loyal or do not love either. The reality is that your view of things are skewed,the facts of your actions and the results of your behavior, are i hope easier to see with Balle. I have been by your side for years , I am the most loyal friend you could ever hope to have, i have taken you from a girl with not even a high school education and did my best to guide you to adulthood. You refused to meet what i said my needs were,and continued to follow your own choices, nagging nagging, nagging, and continuing in the face of reality to fabricate an illusory , view of your actual help.. I am hoping that the BALL-e situation clarifies your role. In her case , if you were to tell her , but last year i was loyal and stood by your cage when you were sick, and you know i love you. JUST look in her eyes, -you ignored Jeffreys advice re peabo. i know you care , but that is not enough, your actions are directly responsible for what has happned . your actions , not your motivations , your actions

I don't know how our recollection of events can be so different.
In my view you offered no guidance or help with difficult decisions when Ball-e was pregnant and in labor. You placated me by repeating I can do what I want because it's my dog. To questions you responded without giving it thought with 5 contradicting answers so when I pick X and something goes wrong, you can then say 'I told you to do Y'.
You left to NYC and didn't answer your phone when she was giving birth while Story stayed on the phone with me throughout the night. I was terrified about anything going wrong and I made decisions not based on Story's opinion, but the vet's. I hope we can at least agree I absolutely wanted to do what was best for Ball-e and had no other motivation. You made no decisions, waited for the result of mine and then lectured me about what I did wrong. Well, at that point I could see it for myself and don't need anyone to point out the mistakes. Regarding Fatt-e you were unfortunately again not available during the critical moments and I had to make decisions by myself about where to take her and what to do. You clearly had no control over it and I am not suggesting you left me without help on purpose. You were very helpful and kind once you landed. I did the best I could and there was nothing irresponsible or reckless about my decisions. I do feel guilty for not being home for the few hours before you left when something happended to Fatt-e.
For the record, I am not suggesting you are responsible for anything that happend with the dogs at all. They were fully my responsibility. You were not involved and I realize the mistakes that were made. What I am saying is that you are not in a position to discipline me about it or blame me for what happened

I will help you with watching Balle/ It concerns me that you still have not learned that your responsibilities are yours ,, not the people around you. I feel sorry re Fatte. it was unfortunately inevitable. You took my gift to you. probably the best dog i have seen, treated it carelessly or recklessly. I told you the moment I saw Peabo to get rid of it. you chose not to. I specifically told you i didnt want Balle pregnant as it would change her personality which was unique. If you refused to do as i asked and you had the right to breed her, but it should be with a champion blood line, you chose not to. I asked you to give it away to someone other than your grandfather, you chose not to. , You took balle and were careless with peabo around. Irresponsible , When she was diagosed as pregnant ,you made a big showing buying all the equiptmnet , so it could give birth in the house. you had gloves all the stuff you wanted, however when push came to shove , you told me story advised you and , you turned over the best dog to people you didnt know at all,, left the dog with the lowest forms of life , and the result is the result. you then are both carelsss and reckless with keeping the last dog under close supervision. you take it to a place where you dont know anyone, get sold a bullshit story , buy in like you do to so many other on,line , tv scams , with again the same result. Unlike balle , I can take care of myself. though you claim to love us both, neither one of us remain the same.
