Aside from the fact that some of the allegations being levied against me are false, those actions which resulted in my pleading to soliciting a minor for prostitution and soliciting prostitution, as well as those which are the subject of the civil suits being reported on in the media, occurred many years ago. This was a different time and chapter in my life and one, with the help of counseling from professionals, I have put behind me. I am a different person today than I was then and am focusing on helping the community through educational, scientific and healthcare philanthropic contributions, as well as discharging my responsibility as a financier at the highest professional level. My friends, [REDACTED], and my business associates have all been subject to harassment, and false inuendo. I can also categorically state that Prince Andrew did not participate in any improper activity.
