I know you believe what you say.

I don't see it. I am trying to understand but nobody I've talked to shares or understands your recently expressed views about me and they also all arrive at the same conclusion in attempts to explain your puzzling behavior...it's not a helpful one.

I respect your opinion and I recognize I could be wrong. One of my instruments is indicating I am descending when all others show me straight and level. I am tempted but I don't want to dismiss it, on the off chance it is not broken.

So can you put your impartial friend hat on for a second, and explain to me objectively, without referring to the past, what you are talking about? What, in your view, am I doing wrong and what you suggest as a realistic solution? That would be very helpful.
