An Indian Odyssey

Wednesday, January 25, 2012

It's the second week of our Condé Nast Traveller Gold List sale, and we've got a twin-centred Indian odyssey as well as a sun fix closer to home. First up: India, where the restored Taj Mahal Palace is the jewel in Mumbai's crown once more, and the Taj Falaknuma Palace in Hyderabad provides extras you never dreamed of - like scattering you with rose petals as you check in. Too far? Head to Cyprus, where the self-enclosed Aphrodite Hills Resort has enough going on for families, spa-goers and simple sun-worshippers to be satisfied.

iconic symbols of Mumbai. Rich with history but always forward-looking, the 560-room hotel has played host to a who's who of international elites, from rock stars to dignitaries, impressing with stately service, opulent furnishings and a vibe of elegance and class. It's no wonder that this hotel regularly ends up on the World's Best lists of venerable travel magazines from New York to Beijing.

Taj Falaknuma Palace - India

Taj Falaknuma Palace was once a white-marble monolith owned by the royal rulers of Hyderabad. Over the years, the Falaknuma ("Mirror in the Sky") has transformed into a 60-room hotel that's high on European-style splendor, perched 2,000 feet above India's fifth-biggest city.

Tee Off in Cyprus

Aphrodite Hills - Cyprus

With views of the Mediterranean from its high vantage point, and surrounded by manicured golf greens dotted with lakes and olive trees, the InterContinental Aphrodite Hills Resort Hotel, near Paphos, exudes a sense of relaxation. Add such amenities as a top-notch spa and restaurants, kids clubs and a tennis academy, and you have a family-friendly venue to enjoy a slice of island life.
