It is October 10 – but there is no minute free left (all are high government meetings or press that can't be canceled). He arrives to Paris at 6am and leaves at 9pm on the same day (for London). He is not even sleeping there.

I can't be in Paris as I will be in Zagreb with my father (he is not well so I really need to do). I will fly that night to London directly.

Let's talk tmr

Every minute in Paris is already booked (overbooked) and it is less than a day.

However we should think about later in the year (early next year) –

Lets discuss it mid week.

we might try Lucas Papademos -- former interim PM and ECB guy from Greece. The head of the central Bank in Ireland, Patrick Honohan is also very good. Vitor Gaspar -- finance minister from Portugal and another former ecb is also very good. Then from the UK: Adair Turner, head of the FSA. Then there are the economists: Ken Rogoff et al. Or Paul de Gruawe. <http://www.econ.kuleuven.ac.be/ew/academic/intecon/degrauwe/>

From the IMF -- Olivier Blanchard, he oversees all their research and is an authority on what ails Europe. is it possible that you and bill come to paris the 9th or 10th
