[REDACTED] has asked me to print your personal photos that I have taken from your computer for her. I will not do this without your direct instruction and permission. I cannot ask for your permission without bringing to your attention that I have noticed that some photos taken by you have been used in what my gut tells me is an inappropriate manner. These photos include [REDACTED] on your property. I am sure with absolutely no malicious intent, just not good judgement. I would prefer(if it suits you) that this email stays between us. I will wait for your permission to print any photos of her with your friends, taken by you, that I have taken from your computer.
