I cant fix starving
I could make life more fun seems a reasonable goal

if you want to add a machine that really gets smart into the mix, will be happy take it on (not by myself) have thought about that since 1968 (when I saw 2001 and realized no one even knew how to portray what a smart machine would look like)

was talking to you never published this point is that school and how it drives people crazy (parent and kids) is my real concern no one suffers from going to Harvard (a good time is had by all) unless there is serious debt but, everyone suffers from paying a lot for the nothing education taht provides no credential and no actula education and lost of debt (think syracuse, palm beach atlantic) you greatly diminish your aurguments by constant referene to your family, if we had 1000 familys and a control group, some of it might make sense, so far many peopl have done well in spite of the shitty schools, get over it no one cares. you are clver and could devote yourself to something that would have impact. talking about max milo , reminds me of that comedian that used to imitate slide shows of family trips and the pain of having to sit through one more
