great, taxes are the key, unlike the coal issues in England, there is an already existing army of laws, penalties and enforcement people ready to take down a whole host of money related initiatives. bit coin is anonymous, anti govt. I think we could design a combo of zero knowledge - encrypted, but transparent, currencies so that for example. the extreme would be every unit of currency has a serial number. there is a transaction record, I give you ten specific dollars, it is coded according to the nature of the transaction, etc. the govt has a record as it is the issuer. it takes its cut. directly, (taxes). it can't increase money supply without everyone seeing it. I am talking to Mike Rabin about zero knowledge auctions, all great fun. and yes, more likely successful, compared to bio, but if done right almost too obvious. the biology should be shelved to next, but offers more play

As do I.

Happy middle of the night.
