

To: Jeffrey Epstein[jeevacation@gmail.com]
From: Barnaby Marsh
Sent: Sat 12/8/2012 11:27:09 PM
Subject: new life

-on walk across park, occurred to me that the last subject we shared thoughts on is one of the most important of all life, and not to be taken lightly.

Yes, lots of time is lost that could be doing other things - a good 12 to 15 years commitment, and life is so short.

But there are very significant kinds of personal elevation and satisfaction... while I know lots of people who are doing amazing things and very busy, none seem have regrets about kids overall, not a single one...

Could it be that all these great creative minds are being hijacked, or is the satisfaction value genuine? How is this measured objectively??!!! Does it matter? It would be interesting to discuss further, and I will with others...