

To: jeevacation@gmail.com[jeevacation@gmail.com]

Cc: [REDACTED]

From: Lvjet

Sent: Sat 7/12/2014 4:02:50 PM

Subject: Fuel prices JFK, EWR SWF

FUELprice.pdf

Jeffrey,

regarding your question on airlines fuel prices: not exactly sure, but appears they are paying less then $3.06 per gallon with their daily uplift potential.

I always try make an consorted effort to pay the least for fuel at every airport,.

I spoke to World Fuel, my contract fuel source, for big uplifts when flying the Boeing and GIV, sometimes I can negotiate better fuel prices direct with local FBO's depends on the airport.

in Newark according to World Fuel, if I upload 5000 gallons, I can get fuel for $3.07 plus taxes= $3.49941 per gallon, World Fuel is considering me a commercial carrier with my FAR125 certificate. This is a gray area , and could potentially not be valid. I had this conversation while fueling in JFK when we flew the Boeing to Paris in 2012, I was offered commercial pricing, when the invoice came in, JFK Port authority said, commercial carriers are considered to be daily Scheduled Airline, not charter Non-schedule carriers. Potential is there, but not guaranteed.

See attachment:

thank you,

Larry