

To: Jeffrey Epstein[jeevacation@gmail.com]
From: Jermaine Ruan
Sent: Wed 4/30/2014 8:47:12 PM
Subject: Video Conference update

Good Day Boss,

The Chromeboxes arrived yesterday afternoon. On May 5th, once programmed, should I install LSJ Box in the kitchen using the existing HDTV or should purchase a new TV for an alternate area (perhaps the chillax room or Pavilion office as suggestions)? NY Chromebox will be sent to them as soon as it is programmed.

As promised, I reviewed the Logitech cc3000e. I do like a lot of the features:

- It is true plug and play
- Great auto focus on the camera
- Sleek design for both camera and speaker and a remote
- Not isolated to any one video conferencing forum
- Both Windows and Mac friendly
- Bluetooth capable for voice call from your phone
- 'Add-on' apps for controlling the camera from a different location

The draw backs are:

- It is not a standalone unit. It requires a laptop or desktop
- You would have to feed the HDTV through a third party setup or the extra video port on a computer
- There is not an app for smartphone controls
- From what I can tell there is no way to adjust the white-light setting in camera (too much light will make cool colors whiter than they really are.)

In my opinion it is a quality affordable solution. The only true disappointment was there wasn't an integrated HDMI port.

Respectfully submitted

JRuan