no thanks, you can suggest that there are rumors of bids of 250 on another eastside house . but thats as far as i would go. . and at more than twice the size of the 81 st house, it now seems a bargain

In mentioning how crazed this market for NYC town houses is, can I mention that you have gotten bids on your house for 250 million? The story focuses on those rare assets that may command almost any price -- a pink diamond/a van gough self-portrait/and the largest residence in NYC.

That would be pretty much in terms of you -- mentioning how the price of the house sky rocketed along with those other rarest of the rare assets. And how that is the new focus when it comes to assets -- that which is rare and special and not that which anyone can buy (ie a NYC penthouse).

I just thought it made sense to say say the most coveted residence in NYC is yours and not 15 east 81st street.

Let me know...
