Attached are two quotes from Clarity which i have not yet negotiated pricing:

1) Amp only - Halo A-51 7,893 (equip 5410 (amp 4500 & 910 for terminations) labor 1840 sales tax 643)

2) Amp and Speakers - Halo A-51 & Triad Speakers 15,624 (amp 4500, terminations 910 & speakers 7100) labor 1840 sales tax 1274)

Original Sunfire Amp cost was 3,825 plus tax and labor

Vendor cannot promise install by Sunday since they do not have Amp in stock and expect 3 days for delivery

They are more comfortable that Amp would be installed by early next week

Please advise

Hello Rich,

As per our discussion this morning, I have attached two updated versions of our proposal to reflect additional variations.

To be clear, our recommended proposal (Rev A) would in effect give us the confidence going forward that your equipment would last (and perform very well) for quite some time.

Please see the attached proposals, one with speaker replacements as well as an amplifier replacement, and another with only the amplifier replacement.

The proposal with the speaker replacements is, what I would say, bare minimum as far as strategy goes. It would provide a safe and predictable load to the new amplifier enhancing its reliability and longevity.

The proposal that only changes the amplifier, should be viewed as a Band-Aid (in the rain). You will have sound, but I'm not comfortable stating with confidence that it will last over the long run. In addition, should it fail within the warranty period I'm fairly certain it will receive heavy scrutiny (and manufacturers examination) as it's a very robust/reliable unit and doesn't have a high failure rate. It may, or may not fall under the umbrella of a warranty repair (we will always try to have items purchased from us covered, but it's not a sure thing).

Please review the two proposals and contact me with any questions.
Please note, the Panamax equipment has been removed for savings, but is also a recommended item, and may be added back in should you choose (again recommended).

Thanks,
Matt
