A few months ago I met an interesting woman (what's new?) and we stayed in touch. I invited her to the opening of Atelier Courbet last Friday. While there I discovered that she lives on [REDACTED] St and that about 10 years ago she lived in [REDACTED]. I figured she knew Anthony and I told her that Anthony and I were partners in the property. This evening I took her out to dinner and to the NY Philharmonic to hear Beethoven's 9th (it was great). Before the concert, I happened to ask if she had any brothers or sisters. She said no. She then asked me "you have a brother, right?" I didn't remember mentioning anything about family with her before, but I said "Yes, I have one brother and we're 18 months apart". She then said "I know your brother". Her name is [REDACTED]. She is a friend of the girl [REDACTED] that works for you. [REDACTED] is Italian, tall and very slender.

She said that when I told her that I was involved with [REDACTED] she started to put 2+2 together. She then asked Susan what your brother's name was. When she said Mark.....

Go figure.
