

To: Jeffrey Epstein[jeevacation@gmail.com]
From: Milken Institute
Sent: Wed 10/16/2013 11:22:56 PM
Subject: Milken Institute Review: What role for government in housing finance?

Having trouble viewing th

Paper or pixels?

3 ways to receive to the Milken Institute Review

Download the app

Buy new digital editions for $1.99, back issues for 99 cents or a year's subscription for $5.99 for iPhone and iPad.

Get the Kindle version

Subscribe

Receive hard copies of our quarterly journal for $59 a year.

Milken Institute Review: A smaller role for government in housing finance

The latest Milken Institute Review offers a plan for rebooting America's housing finance system. "Our proposal would keep the federal backstop in place, but limit taxpayer risk by putting investors' capital at loss position. We would retain several roles for the feds, including insuring the system against catastrophe, standardizing mortgage securitization and subsidizing homeownership in visible and easily understood ways," said [REDACTED] (Urban Institute), [REDACTED] (Milken Institute), [REDACTED] (Urban Institute) and [REDACTED] (Moody's Analytics).

Also in this issue: Japanese Prime Minister [REDACTED] go-for-broke to jolt the Japanese economy from its slumber, the road to obsolescence in the digital age, programming, Burma's path to integration with the global community, a look at personalized medicine, an analysis of Mexico's political and economic challenges, and an outline of the depths to which the Palestinian economy has fallen, and

MILKEN INSTITUTE | Changing the World in Innovative Ways
1250 Fourth Street | Santa Monica, CA 90401
1101 New York Avenue, NW | Suite 620 | Washington, DC 20005

Manage Subscriptions | click here to opt-out

connect

