do you mean a nicer way to respond to the same complaint over and over and over, though when i propose a solution the only one I know you either ignore it, or tell me you have your own opinions about how to deal with it. or is there a nicer way to respond to you feeling it is your prerogative to monitor who goes in and out of my massage room and when . ? or is there a nicer way to respond to you suggesting things that never happen , in violation of a repeated understanding. I am trying as much as i can to be understanding of your concerns, [REDACTED]'s age. my preferring to look at younger women, what happens in ten years. your crying as opposed to making a commitment to try harder, , your crying instead of being thankful for our love for each other, your crying and then sending me a note to tell me what damage i have done to your day.

I am sorry you cancelled your meeting, I also cancelled morning lectures and now sitting at the other one and start crying every other minute. not nice either, there must be a better way to point out a problem I believe. In fact we did speak about it already, recently on the island, when you decided to kindly help. Why did you decide to bring it up the way you did today?

Why did you send this ? Do you want to make my day harder? Do you want me to regret pointing out a problem ? Or did you just want me to feel bad
