The general manager of MWR called [REDACTED] to ask about it. Someone sent them an email with links to some articles about me, the one with me and Story and Prince Andrew. I was on the call as well..I may have misunderstood, but it sounded like he said there was an article on Gawker that talked about [REDACTED] dating me and referencing that story. He could have been referring to an old Gawker link the person may have emailed to them as well. We then called the 2 owners of MWR, Rob Kauffman and Michael Waltrip to discuss with them and answer any questions they may have. They are good with it on a personal level, but said they have to keep the best interest of the team in mind and the CEO of Aaron's is the kind of person who doesn't even want someone holding a beer in their hands while wearing an Aarons shirt. Rob doesn't think they will care what the truth really is, just what the perception is. They don't intend to bring it to Aaron's attention right now and are hoping they won't find out. We are going to try and confirm with MWR who sent the email, but we think its a girl B has had issues with in the past who is behind the blog. We think she's the one who also emailed his current sponsor, Dollar General.

We have been working with a web reputation company for me. Before when you googled "[REDACTED] girlfriend" the first thing that came up was the blog which was saying nasty things about us. They wanted to push that down in the list, so they needed to create content with that term to move to the top. Also, when you googled my name, the first thing that would come up was the article about Prince Andrew, so they are trying to push that down too.

Rob has asked that we hire a lawyer to go through the documents online and to basically write a statement saying they've researched the case and that I was never convicted of anything and that all the articles are slanderous and gossip and overblown. [REDACTED] has a lawyer he uses in NC he's going to have do this. He may want to speak with Jack if that's OK. We won't give the statement to anyone unless its necessary if sponsors question it. They just think its a good thing to have a third party professional statement since there is nothing out there from me or any statements denying my involvement.
