I really think they should all be wearing at least thematically similar outfits when you go around to conferences with them, or when you have guests over to the house. It would be extremely chic/obnoxious.

When you're traveling it's a different story. Or maybe it's best to have a mall army of attractive women in uniform following you around WHEREVER you go.

I thought of a few brands. If you need visuals let me know sweet boyish suits from Band of Outsiders

Swiss tailoring, pretty conservative and sleek from Akris

American sportswear tailoring, very straight forward and elegant by Derek Lam or Jil Sander, which is timeless and classic, though once it gets into the stores might be a bit boring.

I know you could engage any of these brands to design capsule collections for you if you really wanted to.

But of course Valentino is the best.
