I would highly appreciate your advice on this! What is more important ? Career or love? I already postponed love for few months because you know me very well, I'm way to independent (even though I'm starving at the end of the day)! [REDACTED] hired this new CEO that at the moment I'm assisting within [REDACTED] company, [REDACTED] which is someone I'm really looking up to, and admiring his career development so far. As the company is in a very sensitive situation, salary increase is not in their radar,so somehow 'employee exploitation' is a common commodity I believe that with my skills can 'earn' a bit more than £1200 a month. I've been with no financial support since I joined working for this company, and I'm very happy happy with the work experience I'm earning
