I am confused here.. two conflicting messages.... I think if she comes and listens it will be useful for me.. and you might find that she surprises you..

not only do i not want to talk to her at all, but i very much prefer she not attend. if you want her to talk to your friends, she can come and do it , This is not about origins it is about science. read barnabys cv, and then compare

Is she on the Advisory Board? what is her name, and I would like to know how she will improve the discussion.

she is a brilliant woman.. a lawyer...(I think she may have been attorney general or something like that in Arizona before Michael Crow talked her into joining the university). I talked to her today precisely because I wondered about that... and had thought about rethinking her participation... but I am convinced she will be a useful addition.. she plans to 'observe' but she is so remarkable that I expect you will enjoy her, and she will improve the discussion in the end.. Also, it is important I think that she get a sense of exactly what we can do, because, from a practical perspective, she is going to help make it happen. You will like her.. I do.. she is one of my favorite people at the University.

In washington DC now.. feeling a little more invigorated and upbeat.. even though I still haven't slept more than 6 hours in the past few days..
