the plot thickens.

bill is thinking of coming back for 9 months. please don't repeat that, even to boris. i know boris knows that but i just don't want this spread around via me, or getting back to bill or boris.

bill says stevie is too mean to be a ceo (plot calling the kettle...uhhh) and that he needs to be more huggie and sunshiney to the outside world. steve argues that it's about innovation and making good products (he thinks like steve jobs...focus on deliverables and good stuff not the social side of things). or i guess...make something people want and you don't have to be huggy.

they are also considering a weird model akin to what it used to be with a CEO and a strong CTO (the manager like ballmer and the technical person like bill, back in the day). steve might fit the CTO job.

process slowed bc person on the board running the search just derailed his own company and is a little distracted since now the sharks smell blood and are circling. his company likely to implode.

how are you?
