Jeffrey Which computer gave you this error?

IF needed I can stop by and check on this today

How this is possible is explained below

Duplicate ip address errors can be alarming sounding but they are not a major concern and should resolve themselves quickly

Every device on the network including iPhones , iPads , sonos , apple tv crestron the airport boxes themselves all get what are called DHCP leased Ip numbers and will rotate between 10.0.1.1- 10.0.1.254 range as they are turned on and off

So when you turned on your Computer it had a duplicate ip on the network and it warned you as network services would have been broken till the DHCP Server could give you a fresh IP.

Hopefully this error was a temporary glitch and you have since been able to connect to your network without this error
